The meeting of last Saturday, however, in some respects departed from the routine which has been maintained, and was distinguished by two new features, viz: Judge Tyler's ex- (for it was producing no interest at position of the financial affairs of the county in relation to measures proposed by the respective candidates, and a vindication by Gen. the State Legislature. Judge Tyler's address, given in an elevated tone of judicial exposition, was a most important effort. It presented the financial interests of the county for men's consideration from a point of view which he alone can be said to occupy, and he demonstrated by an unimpeachable statistic statement that the so-called low-tax platform of Squire Frederick would involve the county in expenses and dry up sources of revenue in such a manner as to increase rather than diminish the burdens now pressing upon us .-Especially he reminded the audience that Montgomery county is a bondholding county, and would lose much more than she would make by repudition. But he gave much the larger portion of his time to a demonstration of the unequal pressure of taxation in this State from the two causes of unequal assessment and inefficient collection of taxes, and maintained that the present depression of the State's credit was mainly due to these causes, and that her bonds, like those of Georgia
